

A method and its apparatus for inspecting a semiconductor device in which failure occurrence conditions on a whole wafer are estimated by calculating the statistic of potential contrasts in pattern sections from sampled images to implement higher throughput and defective conditions of process are detected at an early stage with the help of time series data of the estimated result.